

(OPENING)N. S. HARSHA: CHARMING JOURNEY

FEBRUARY 4 [SAT] – JUNE 11 [SUN], 2017 MORI ART MUSEUM [53F, ROPPONGI HILLS MORI TOWER]

TO THE COSMIC VIA SOUTHERN INDIA

The Mori Art Museum, Tokyo, is proud to stage “N. S. Harsha: Charming Journey,” the first major solo exhibition by the Indian artist, from Saturday, February 4 to Sunday, June 11, 2017.

N. S. Harsha was born in 1969 in the ancient capital of Mysuru in southern India, and continues to be based there. While international interest in contemporary Indian art world has burgeoned alongside the country’s recent economic growth, N. S. Harsha has taken part in numerous international shows. At the same time, he has continued to engage earnestly with the many aspects of “life” that surround him: the culture and natural environment of southern India, the relationships between humans and the region’s flora and fauna. In the process, he has carved out a unique position for himself. The artist deploys an array of expressive techniques, predominantly by painting alongside drawing, sculpture, installations and workshops. Underlying in all his work is a worldview in which the microcosmos, as symbolized by the human body, and macrocosmos, embracing all things, exist simultaneously – combined with a keen eye for life’s absurdities.

“N. S. Harsha: Charming Journey” will survey two decades of N. S. Harsha’s practice, by presenting around 70 major works (including new works) produced by the artist from 1995 onward. The “journey” of the title hints not only at the life journey of the artist, but various other journeys too; including India’s economic development, the journey back and forth between the traditional and the contemporary, and an expansion from our everyday endeavors to a cosmic point of view. With an eye on Mysuru as a starting point, N. S. Harsha depicts situations and aspects of the world in a critical and humorous fashion, presenting its delights – ironies, love and paradoxes included – as a “charming journey.”

His is a viewpoint that, although locally-rooted, this encourages us to reconsider the ways in which modern and contemporary art have traditionally been interpreted through the Western canon. N. S. Harsha proposes an art that transcends time and space, freeing it to become something more universal.

◆ OBJECTIVE

To date, the Mori Art Museum has staged both region-specific exhibitions showcasing the current state of contemporary art in rapidly developing parts of the globe such as China, Africa, India and the Middle East, as well as major solo exhibitions by prominent Asian artists. N. S. Harsha was previously one of the artists included in the region-specific exhibition “Chalo! India: A New Era of Indian Art” held in 2008. He has created a unique place for himself on the Indian contemporary art scene through his mastery of various techniques and his diversity of context, informed in parts by the traditional culture of southern India. As well as demonstrating the Mori Art Museum’s approach of taking notable artists from region-specific group shows and presenting them once again in greater depth in major solo exhibitions, “Charming Journey” is N. S. Harsha’s first mid-career retrospective.

◆ EXHIBITION HIGHLIGHTS

[1] Mysuru Tales Helping Us to Decode Globalization of the World

In his playful, allegorical depictions of nature and simple everyday life in southern India, N. S. Harsha casts a critical eye – starting close to home at a local town – over global developments in culture, politics and economics.

“Charming Nation” Series

Take one of his best-known early works: the “Charming Nation” series featuring a variety of stories set in Mysuru. Woven through these paintings are the changes occurring in Indian society since the market liberalization of the early 1990s, hinting at the impact of a globally connected world economy. They Will Manage My Hunger (2006) places the headquarters of the World Trade Organization behind farmland, and asks whether it is the farmers who till the fields, or free trade, that will grow the nation and fill the bellies of children. Charming Nation (2006), meanwhile, implicitly portrays agricultural workers losing their jobs to foreign-made agricultural equipment.

[2] “Repetition” of Motifs to Reflect Both the World’s Universality and Diversity

A striking feature of N. S. Harsha's paintings is the repeated rendering of animal and/or human motifs in a single work. From a distance, the tidy arrangements of similar-looking individuals appear to form a cohesive group, but on closer inspection, they differ in myriad ways: facial expressions, gestures, clothing... the characteristics of each becoming apparent. His paintings thus reflect the diverse nature of India – a single nation, yet composed of multiple languages, faiths and cultures – and at the same time, reveal in miniature a world that could be any country, anywhere.

With their contrasting viewpoints of whole and part, group and individual, the paintings of N. S. Harsha reflect the artist's position as an objective observer of the world.

Work That Defined His Painting Style

The triptych We Come, We Eat, We Sleep (1999-2001) established his style of portraying row upon row of people. The many stages of life from birth to death are depicted through the very basic and everyday acts of moving, eating, and sleeping.

[3] Get to Know the Culture of Mysuru of Southern India, the Birthplace of the Artworks

What sort of place is N. S. Harsha's home of Mysuru in southern India? From what sort of environment and what kind of day-to-day lifestyle do his works emerge from? The artworks and other material on display including photographs and maps in "Charming Journey" will serve as a superb guide to understanding the cultural background behind them.

Experience the Culture and Daily Life of Mysuru

From a corner where you can read a local Mysuru newspaper to an installation using replicas of traditional South Indian cuisine, the exhibition enables visitors to experience the culture and daily life of Mysuru from various angles. In addition, with Mysuru being the heartland of Ashtanga yoga, over the period of the exhibition the Museum will be running events combining fun yoga practice with art appreciation.

Bonus "Resource Room"

A "Resource Room" will be set up for the display of photographs and video footage of everyday Mysuru life and landscapes. These will be on show in conjunction with the artist's sketches, source material including Indian comics that have inspired his work, and traditional Mysuru paintings, in an exploration of the cultural and intellectual context of southern India that forms the backdrop to his practice.

[4] Be Part of Large Paintings and Installations for a Spatial Experience

N. S. Harsha's paintings are not confined to the canvas but extend to the walls and floors, on the ground in parks, and the roofs of temples. Occasionally viewers are encouraged to enter a work, and interact with it for a spatial experience.

In the installation Sky Gazers (2010), the floor is covered in a sea of human faces, their gaze directly fixed at the sky. When the visitor looks upward in the same direction, he or she joins the crowd to become part of the star-filled firmament: an intriguing opportunity to put yourself right in a picture and contemplate where you are, and where the world is heading.

[5] 100 Tokyo Children Offer Their Visions of the “Future” - An N. S. Harsha Community Project

N. S. Harsha has earned a reputation not only for making art, but also for running community projects and workshops with local children in different locations. Here in Tokyo too, he will run a number of mainly child-centered workshops.

Before the exhibition opening, N. S. Harsha joined children from an elementary school near the Mori Art Museum for a workshop that involved imagining what kind of grown-ups they wanted to become and painting those dreams for the future on adult business shirts. The completed shirts are displayed in the exhibition under the title Future. Join us on the top floor of the Roppongi Hills Mori Tower to check out the future, as seen by 100 children.

[6] N. S. Harsha’s Journey Continues Outside the Museum

For the duration of “Charming Journey” visitors will also have the chance to encounter works by N. S. Harsha outside the main exhibition space. The passage on the 52nd floor of the Roppongi Hills Mori Tower will become the setting for Reversed Gaze (2008/2017), featuring human figures painted across a wall - a photo spot where you can “blend” in the picture and photograph yourself. A sculptural work exceeding 2.5 meters in height Matter (2014/2016) is also exhibited at the Roku-Roku Plaza, the entrance to the Roppongi Hills. A monkey (langur) carrying a sphere in its left hand, pointing at somewhere far away in outer space with its right hand, seemingly represents the history of human curiosity towards the future and unknown worlds, and the human desire to attain them.

◆ CURATOR'S MESSAGE Kataoka Mami ("N. S. Harsha: Charming Journey" Curator / Chief Curator, Mori Art Museum)

N. S. Harsha was born 1969 in the ancient capital of Mysuru in southern India. In the 1990s he studied at the MS University of Baroda, internationally renowned for its progressive education, and is currently based in Mysuru. N. S. Harsha has, for the past two decades, taken part in numerous shows around the world, including exhibitions devoted specifically to Indian contemporary art. Meanwhile, he has continued to engage earnestly with "life" around him in its many forms: the traditional culture and natural environment of southern India, and the relationships between humans and the flora and fauna of the region, in the process carving out a unique position in contemporary art.

Woven into the artistic practice of N. S. Harsha is a complex cultural mix: from the figurative tradition of his homeland – for example, in the intricate sculptures at Hindu temples of the Hoysala Dynasty (11-14th century) such as those at Halebid and Belur, and Mysuru-style miniature paintings – to the culture of myths and stories handed down via a tradition of picture scrolls, and media such as modern-day comics; and the "rangoli" sand drawings that are created every morning by the women of the household. The artist makes skilled use of multiple media, focusing mainly on painting, and also including drawing, sculpture and site-specific installations and workshops, all united by a worldview in which the microcosmos, as symbolized by the human body, and macrocosmos, embracing all things, exist simultaneously, plus a keen eye for day-to-day absurdities and moments of duality.

This exhibition titled "N. S. Harsha: Charming Journey" is a mid-career retrospective bringing together for the first time the artist's most important works to date. It focuses on the development of his practice while encompassing his major works from 1995 through 2016. The word "journey" of the exhibition title hints not only at the life of the artist himself, but also at various other "journeys" including the political and economic development of India, the parallel changes in different communities, as well as changes observable in the daily lives of people, the journey back and forth between the traditional and the contemporary, and the journey from a biological scientific worldview to an astronomical or cosmic scale. From figures that sometimes number in the thousands in a single painting, it is possible to unravel the lives of individuals. Sometimes within these works, we human beings are depicted as mere specks in the vast universe, alongside other organisms such as flora and fauna. At the same time we are able to observe N. S. Harsha's curiosity about the profound mysteries of the universe, and our unpredictable future. The processes by which these "journeys" are undertaken are not always "charming" yet N. S. Harsha channels his critical, humorous gaze toward the absurdities of our world, and its duality of values, presenting them to us as a "charming journey."

To date, the Mori Art Museum has staged both regional exhibitions showcasing the current state of contemporary art in up-and-coming parts of the globe such as China, Africa, India and the Middle East, as well as major solo exhibitions by prominent Asian mid-career artists. "N. S. Harsha: Charming Journey" will be positioned as one of this solo exhibition series. India is composed of multiple states, languages, culinary cultures and religions, each of which has developed over thousands of years, making for a history of extraordinary complexity. Mysuru, where the artist is based, has existed as a kingdom with a rich cultural and artistic history since the 14th century. In recent years there has been a growing body of research on the idea of “multiple modernities,” and we hope that by unraveling art through the viewpoint of one artist – N. S. Harsha – and the multifaceted culture of Mysuru that continues to inspire him, dominant Western notions of modern and contemporary art will be liberated to become something more universal, transcending time and space.

MAM COLLECTION IS A SERIES OF DIVERSE, THEME-BASED EXHIBITIONS SHOWCASING MORI ART MUSEUM'S PERMANENT COLLECTION.

MAM COLLECTION 004: IMAGINING THE UNKNOWN STORIES

Participating Artists: Yoneda Tomoko (b. 1965 in Hyogo, Japan, lives and works in London)
Shilpa Gupta (b. 1976 in Mumbai, lives and works in Mumbai)
Yee I-Lann (b. 1971 in Sabah, Malaysia, lives and works in Kuala Lumpur)

Curated by: Kondo Kenichi (Curator, Mori Art Museum)

“MAM Collection 004” will present works by three artists: Yoneda Tomoko, Shilpa Gupta, and Yee I-Lann. For all works on exhibit here, the artists researched legends and historical events they had not actually experienced in person, using their own imaginations to recreate these events and render them as artwork.

Yoneda Tomoko’s photograph series “Between Visible and Invisible” takes as its theme the historical relationship between that which can, and cannot, be seen. In one of them, Freud’s Glasses - Viewing a text by Jung II (1998), she employs spectacles actually used by Sigmund Freud to view text by Carl Jung who was his prodigy yet later parted ways. Exactly how Freud felt upon reading that text is left to our imagination.

In Shilpa Gupta’s sound installation Tryst with Destiny - Speech on the granting of Indian Independence, August 14th, 1947, Jawaharlal Nehru (1889-1964) (2007-08), the artist can be heard singing, through a microphone, the speech by the first Indian prime minister Jawaharlal Nehru given on the eve of the country’s independence, to her random tune. A microphone, which is usually used for giving speeches, has been turned into a speaker from which Nehru’s somber words pour out as a nostalgic song.

“Sulu Stories” (2005) is a photograph series by Yee I-Lann featuring legends and stories from the Sulu Archipelago (now part of the Philippines). Sulu Archipelago, adjacent to Malaysia and Indonesia, was independent as Sultanate of Sulu from the 15th to 19th century, yet has now become the base of anti-government forces and terrorist organizations and travel from outside is restricted. The artist was also unable to enter the central Sulu, and she completed the series by superimposing various images on the pictures taken from the surrounding sea based on research.

These slices of legends and history, recreated from the artists’ subjective viewpoints and rendered using approaches different from the usual documentary format, speak to the soul in subtle, unobtrusive ways.

MAM

MAM SCREEN FEATURES SCREENINGS OF SIGNIFICANT SINGLE-CHANNEL VIDEO WORKS FROM AROUND THE WORLD.

MAM SCREEN 005: NIWA YOSHINORI SELECTED VIDEO WORKS

Curated by: Kumakura Haruko (Assistant Curator, Mori Art Museum)

“MAM Screen 005” will showcase the works on video of artist Niwa Yoshinori (b. 1982). Setting his work in the public spaces of various countries, and locations with political connections, Niwa stages social and historical interventions by engaging in what at first glance appear to be meaningless and absurd acts and schemes, and presents on video a portion of these happenings in their entirety, including the unexpected outcomes resulting from the negotiation, its failures and reactions from others.

In this exhibition, we present a special edition of Niwa’s four-part “Communism” series which is in the Collection of the Mori Art Museum: Tossing Socialists in the Air in Romania, Looking for Vladimir Lenin at Moscow Apartments, Celebrating Karl Marx’s Birthday with the Japanese Communist Party and Proposing Holding up Karl Marx to the Japanese Communist Party, newly re-edited for this showing. Through “nonsensical” actions and sense of humor that emerge from the series of attempts made by the artists (as indicated by the titles), Niwa’s will have us reconsider the various value systems and significance in our society.

MAM PROJECT IS A SERIES OF EXPERIMENTAL PROJECTS PRODUCED BY THE MORI ART MUSEUM IN COLLABORATION WITH ARTISTS FROM AROUND THE WORLD.

MAM PROJECT 023: AGATHA GOTHE-SNAPE

Curated by: Kumakura Haruko (Assistant Curator, Mori Art Museum)

Supported by: Australia Council for the Arts, Asialink, Arts NSW

“MAM Project 023” showcases the work of Sydney-based internationally-active artist, Agatha Gothe-Snape (b. 1980). Gothe-Snape’s practice centers on improvised performances employing a diverse range of media and methodologies, from PowerPoint slide shows to participatory workshops, texts, and visual scores (musical scores and instructions). This exhibition, her first solo show in Japan, will present new set of works Oh Window, composed of an installation triggered by the Mori Art Museum’s motto “Art + Life,” and a series of performances developing out of it.

The artist interprets the “window” as an edge of two sites of the “art” inside an art museum and the “life” outside. As such, she has created imaginary windows in an exhibition space that is, in fact, windowless. These imaginary windows have been made up of graphics, video footage and so on with motifs including conversations between Gothe-Snape and Museum staff, and discoveries the artist has made around Roppongi Hills - looking through which, you may be able to find the already-given roles and functions of “life” providing different expressions of “art.”

The performances, designed to complement the content of the installation, will be staged over the duration of the exhibition, not only in the gallery itself, but in settings all around Roppongi Hills. The imaginary windows in the gallery space will serve as visual instructions and scores affecting the subsequent performances, which may result in incremental changes to the view from the “windows.”

Furthermore, Oh Window features a wide variety of collaborations with other artists. Most of the video works exhibited in the gallery space were produced in collaboration with Tsuda Michiko, a video artist known for her recent installation and performance pieces. As well, the series of Gothe-Snape’s performances planned in Tokyo from April through May will involve collaborations with other artists.
